We the People 323 A Revolutionary New Year 2019

Good Day to You. It seems our spirits lift with a new year in the eternal hope of it being a better year than the last. I think 2019 will be a revolutionary year for a number of reasons and here are some predictions. The crypto currency hydra will rear its heads again as a possible haven for a faltering world economy, debt and ever volatile currency rates. The global village will be revealed to really be a global government and global bank in disguise. Water in Australia will be relatively scarce as a new federal government pushes even more people into Australia as we march toward over-population and a loss of more habitat, native plants and animals. More high tech everything in 2019 and some distinctly new electric cars will enter the market while 2020 will be the big turning point for electric vehicles. Australia's appalling numeracy and literacy rates in schools will continue to decline because the education sector has been high-jacked by the political left. Homelessness will grow as middle class Australia suffocates economically, being fuelled by a mountain of political correctness and incompetent politicians. People will be saddened by the rise of even more illicit drugs in society and the mindless emphasis on instant gratification. Britain will hopefully truly leave the corrupt European Union and if so, over the next decade the Union Jack will wave proudly and the UK will flourish. The Americans will have a tumultuous year politically as President Trump continues to drain the fetid swamp even though Senators Pelosi and Schumer are desperately trying to reinvigorate socialism. China will become more aggressive economically and militarily and Russia will continue to be an irritant to the free world while Putin increases his personal wealth beyond $200 billion on the aching backs of the good Russian people.

Having said all that, this revolutionary year will see dramatic change in Australia politically and socially. A federal election will be held and the outcome will be more of the same either way with low skilled immigrants flooding this country and facing no job prospects and the effect will be wage stagnation. We will keep digging up more coal to sell to others to burn and watch as international interests buy the best of our country and drive away the possibility of the younger generation ever owning a real home. Locally, the Gold Coast tram will continue south and eventually be seen for what it is, inflexible and shackled to its hopelessly expensive rails. On a brighter note there is the real likelihood the upper echelon of the Council's administration and Political dictators and misfits will leave after the CCC has done its job and maybe, just maybe, Council can be returned to 'we the people' and democracy again but don't look to the State for any help regarding this.

So as free and reinvigorated people what do we do in 2019. Well my advice is to take an interest like the good folk who are standing up against the inappropriate Chinese development on several of our local flood plains. Whatever your cause is, whatever your predilection, start expressing your views in an arena that will promote good change. Write letters, sign petitions, send emails, speak at public rallies and force the elected representatives to change for the better and represent the views of the sane majority. If we don't do it then we are destined to be like an actor in a long running season of Yes Minister with disastrous consequences. By all means be positive and be optimistic but realise this world is a difficult and challenging place and life needs your attention as do your children and most importantly your grand children. Having just been to little Jasmines' 2nd birthday party, I know it's all worth the effort.

Until next time this is Kent Bayley
