Daphne Fancutt AM (1933 – 2020) was a highly successful international tennis great for Australia. Some of her achievements include the Wimbledon Women’s Doubles finals in 1956 Wimbledon (with Fay Muller), the 1956 Australian Open Women’s Doubles semi-final, the Australian Open Singles semi-finals in 1956, and the Wimbledon Mixed Doubles semi-finals in 1956.

The Daphne Fancutt Shield was initiated in 1992 when the Central Queensland Junior Masters Circuit sought team competition match play via Tennis Victoria before the commencement of the Australian Open. Waverley Tennis responded, setting up the event in Daphne’s honour. The event was initially only contested between Queensland-based teams and Waverley Tennis but has since then expanded to include other interstate and local teams.

Daphne embraced this junior challenge event with the aim of providing up and coming junior players with the opportunity to experience team match play, including Daphne’s passion – mixed doubles. Daphne stamped her mark on this event with many attendances over many years and this event will always be a true memorial to a very fine lady and a very talented Australian tennis player.
